

BC-312 –Italian Army Version

At the end of WWII huge lots of US military equipment were sold at auctions. Some sets were used by Italian armed forces. These sets were overhauled by small radio laboratories, adding labels with Italian inscriptions and, of course, an operator booklet in Italian language. The original labels were often removed, making then very difficult any identification of the model variant or of its manufacturer.

Anyway, despite the writings and the labels, these sets were all American made.
